

The King County School-to-Work Program

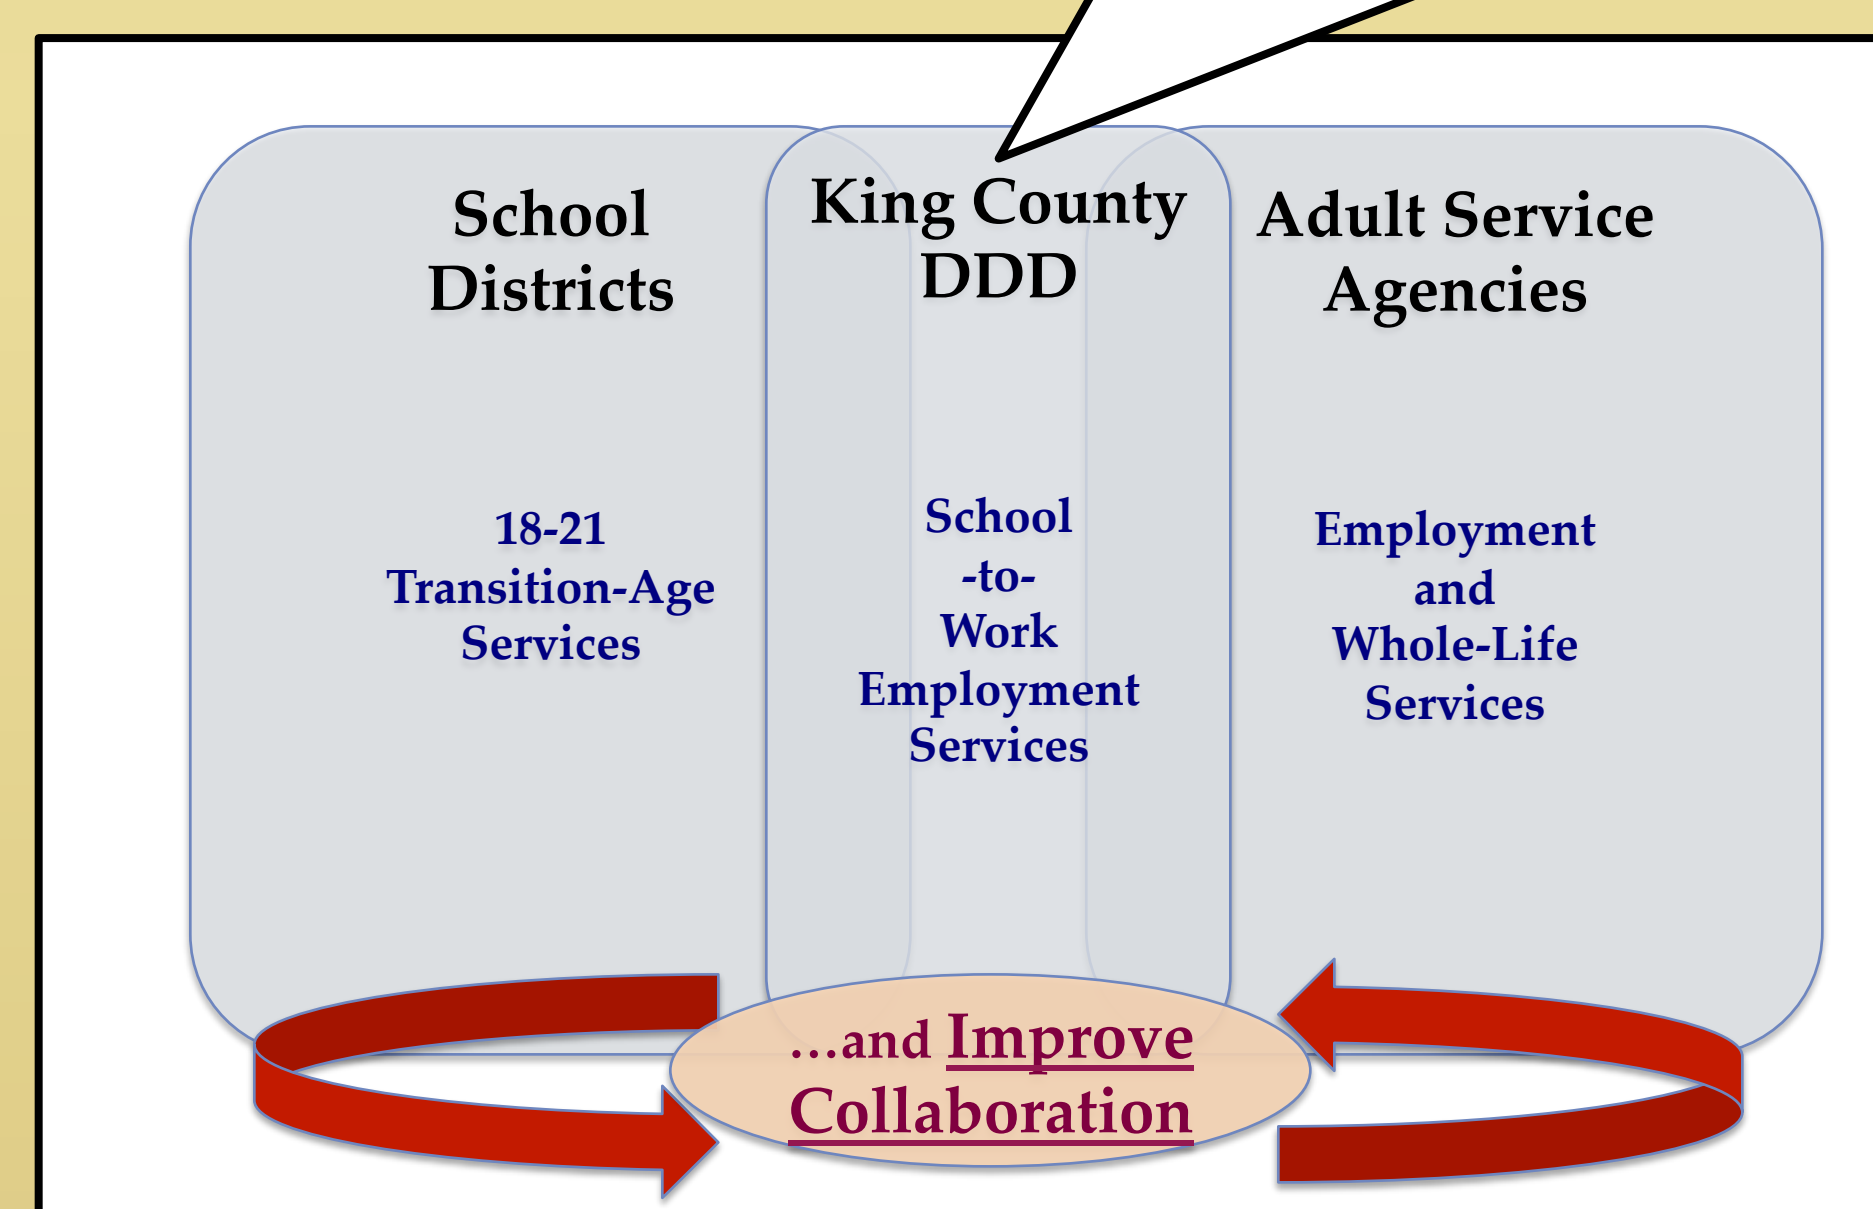

Before School-to-Work, Families Described a Service Gap Between School & Adult Services:

- Families Where:
 - Confused Over What to Do
 - Frustrated About Lack of Service
- Students Where:
 - Losing Skills and Motivation
 - Taking Years to Find Jobs

School-to-Work Seeks to Close the Service Gap...

...By Bringing Adult Employment Services to Students Earlier

Department of Community and Human Services Developmental Disabilities Division

School-to-Work Exceeds National Job Placement Rates

Employment Rate Six Months After Transition is Much Higher for School-to-Work Participants Than Counterparts Not Enrolled

State and National Comparisons of Individuals Employed Who Have Intellectual Disabilities or Similar Conditions:

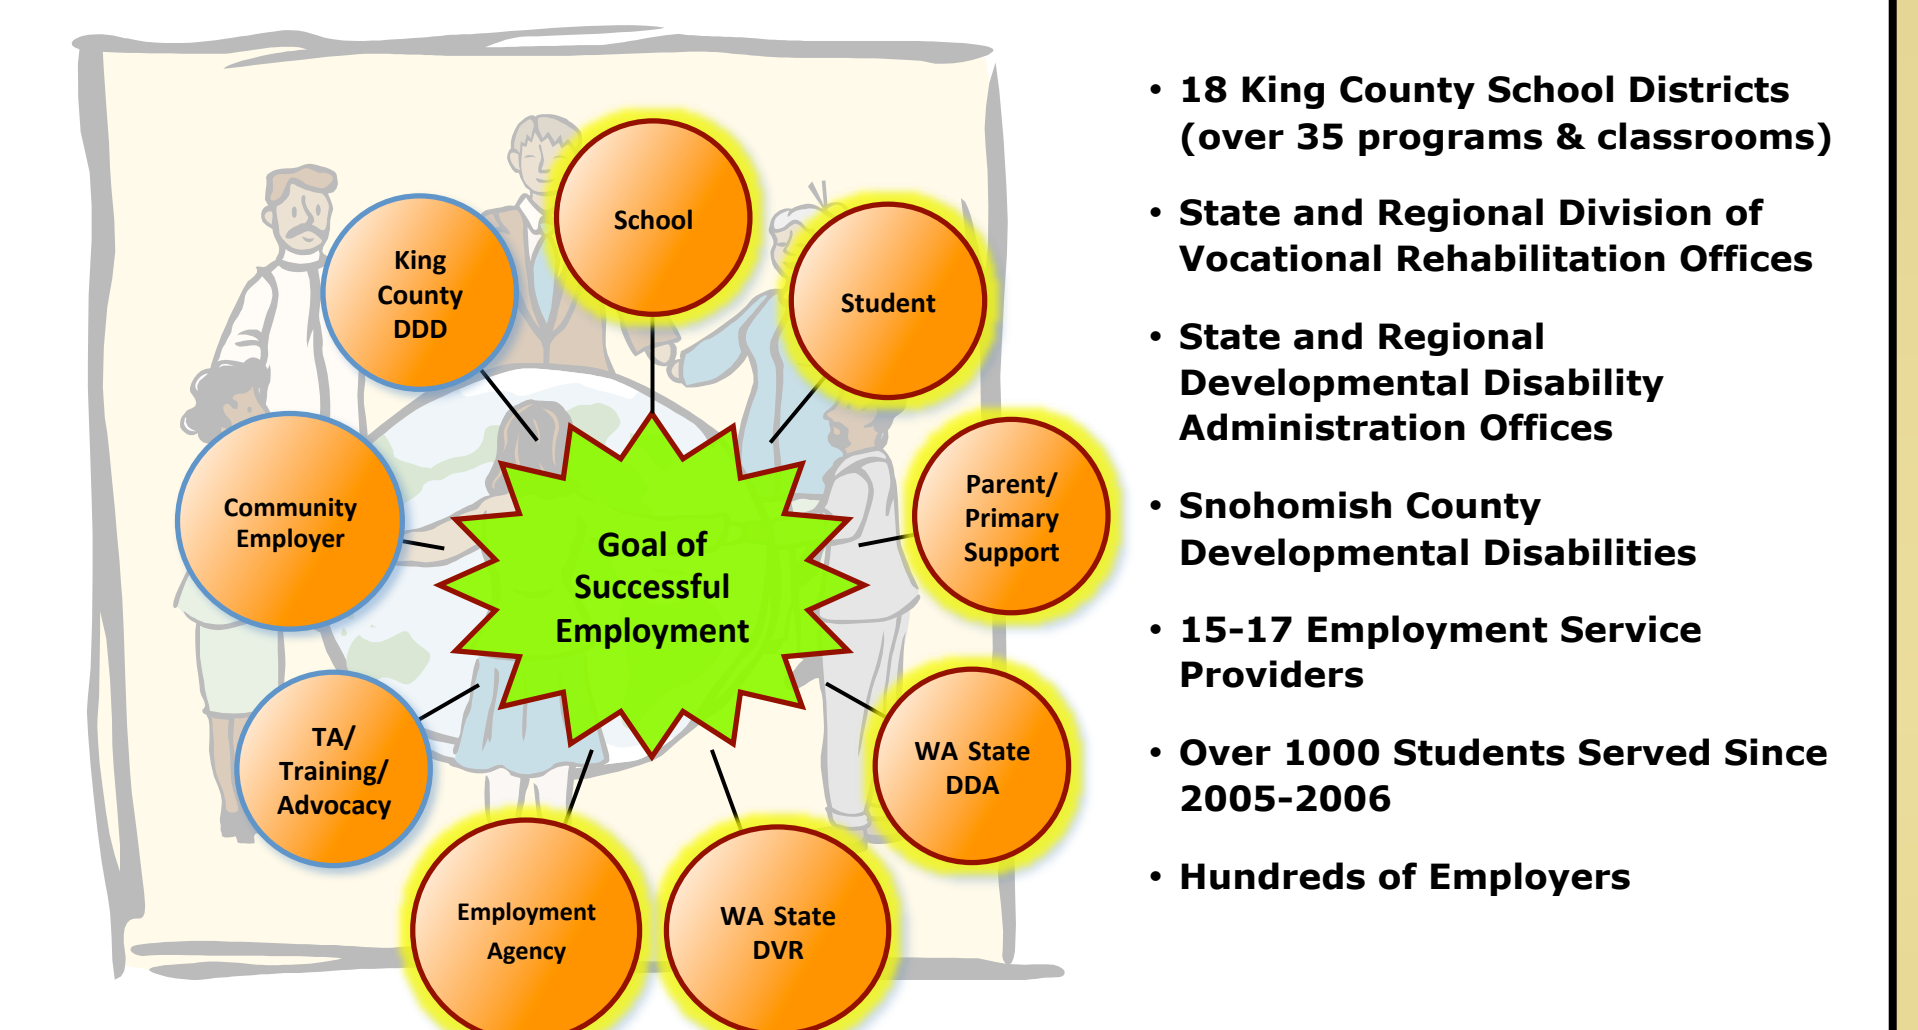

- Washington State (DSHS/DDD, 2007): 13% Transition Age Employed
- National Longitudinal Transition Study-2 (2005): 33% Transition Age Employed
- Alliance for Full Participation: 22% All Adults Employed

Why Employment?

- Relationships:
 - Work is where people develop relationships, friendships, and acquaintances.
 - Identity:
 - Much of who we are and how we are perceived by others is related to where we work and what we do at work.
 - Meaning:
 - Our society values work. By working, people with intellectual and developmental disabilities feel that they are engaged in meaningful activities, as do others in society.
 - Self-Esteem:
 - Through work we often have a sense of accomplishment, increasing our sense of competence and self worth.
 - Economics:
 - Most people with intellectual and developmental disabilities live in or near poverty. Income from paying jobs helps supplement their resources and improves the quality of the lives they can live.
